Description

The Dufour 40 is a cruiser–racer sailboat designed by Umberto Felci and built by the French shipyard Dufour Yachts. Launched in the early 2000s, this model stands out for its perfect balance between sporty performance and onboard comfort, making it a popular choice among both racing sailors and those seeking a fast, well-balanced cruiser.

Its sleek hull lines and narrow bow provide excellent upwind performance, while the wide stern and single or twin rudder configuration (depending on the version) ensure great stability and control, even in strong winds. The underwater profile and weight distribution are optimized to deliver the ideal compromise between speed and safety.

Below deck, the Dufour 40 offers a bright and functional interior, built with high-quality materials. It is typically available in two- or three-cabin layouts, featuring a spacious chart table, an L-shaped galley, and a comfortable central saloon, designed for extended cruising without sacrificing comfort.

Under sail, the Dufour 40 is known for its ease of handling, even with a small crew. Its generous sail plan and excellent power-to-weight ratio make it responsive and fast in a wide range of conditions, achieving impressive cruising speeds.

Overall, the Dufour 40 is a versatile, elegant, and reliable sailboat, capable of meeting the demands of competitive sailing while offering the pleasure and comfort of leisure cruising.
